January 17, 2025

Mexico City, January 17, 2025 – Brand USA, the official tourism marketing organization for the United States, held its annual Sales Mission in Mexico, visiting some of the country’s most important cities. With participation from 25 companies — including states, cities, tourist attractions, and a receptive operator — the event facilitated more than 1,750 business meetings between delegates and key industry members such as tour operators, travel agencies, and OTAs, with more than 300 travel agents trained during specialized training sessions.

“The Mexican market is undeniably vital to the success of U.S. tourism and to Brand USA’s mission of driving international visitation to our country. This market plays a pivotal role in fostering demand for U.S. destinations, attractions, and experiences. The Brand USA Sales Mission is about more than just creating business opportunities — it’s about strengthening relationships, empowering Mexico’s travel professionals, and building the foundation for sustained growth. By connecting our partners with key players in Mexico, we’re ensuring that the United States remains a top choice for Mexican travelers, while creating new opportunities to meet and exceed demand in 2025 and beyond,” said Malcolm Smith, Senior Vice President, Global Markets & Chief Trade and Product Development Officer.

Mexican Market Overview

In 2023, Mexico and Canada together accounted for over 50% of international arrivals to the United States, with Mexico solidifying its position as the second-largest source of international tourists. By September 2024, expanded air capacity enabled 12.3 million Mexicans to explore a wider range of U.S. destinations, an 18% increase compared to the same period in 2023. This number is expected to reach 17.1 million by year-end and exceed 22 million in 2025, surpassing pre-pandemic levels and significantly contributing to the goal of welcoming 86.2 million international visitors annually.

Additionally, Mexican travelers have demonstrated remarkable growth in tourism spending, reaching $21 billion USD in 2023. This increase reaffirms Mexico's position as the second-largest market in terms of tourism expenditures. Factors such as geographical proximity, the expansion of Mexico's middle class, and growing direct air connections have further cemented the United States as a preferred destination and a cornerstone of the travel industry.
