Strengthening ties with the Mexican market

Mexico has become the United States' largest inbound market, a position it is forecasted to hold through 2029. According to the latest data from the U.S. Tourism Economics:

- From January to October 2025, Mexican visitation to the United States increased +9.5% year-over-year, representing nearly 15 million visitors.
- Forecasts indicate 18.5 million Mexican visitors to the United States in 2025, reflecting a +9% increase year-over-year.
- Non-stop seat capacity between Mexico and the United States reached 25.3 million seats in 2025, representing a +2% increase compared to 2024, with approximately 50% of scheduled capacity concentrated in Texas and California.
- The United States remains the #1 destination Mexican travelers are most likely to visit in the next 12 months, reaffirming the market's strong preference for U.S. destinations.

These indicators underscore the Mexican market's resilience, sustained growth, and strategic importance in shaping the future of inbound travel to the United States.

A landmark year for U.S. tourism: major milestones in 2026

The 2026 Sales Mission also provided an opportunity to share updates on significant tourism catalysts taking place across the United States in 2026, including:

- FIFA World Cup 2026, with 11 U.S. host cities preparing for an unprecedented influx of international fans.
- America250, the nationwide celebration commemorating the 250th anniversary of the United States and spotlighting cultural, historical, and community-driven events across the country.
- The Route 66 Centennial, marking 100 years of one of America's most iconic roadways, inspiring themed itineraries and travel experiences across multiple states.

These milestones are expected to drive heightened interest in U.S. destinations and generate new opportunities for the travel trade in Mexico.
